The interest which attaches to the present volume does not chiefly grow out of the geological facts which it embodies, but out of the social and moral character of the man by whom it was penned. In the mere science of geology he was perhaps second to so other who has written upon the subject; but he, unlike Lyell and other matter-ot-tact savans, has so connected the dry and hard details of his theme, with providential purposes and relations, that it is raised at once into the region of theology and asthetics; the rudest stone becomes an altar, and the darkest crypt uncovered by his researches is illumined by a divine light. He saw, what the eye of Science has often failed to discover, that the world was but the reflex of the love and wisdom of an infinite Maker; that from love and wisdom of an infinite Maker; that from the beginning it was designed for the habita-tion of man, and was just as clearly intended for this purpose when its elements were dispersed through space in the form of nebula or vapor as when, after having hardened to granite, and updergone inconceivable transformations, it ripened to the condition in which we now be-

'Testimony of the Rocks," Chicago has not yel attained the size which warrants her in boasting of her dozen or two of murderers in prison at once. That distinction has been won only by New York, though New Orleans might lay claim to it if murder in that Southern metropolis, were a punishable offence. But three men now in our county jail, charged with killing, enable us to show what the city will be capable of when it attains a larger growth. We doubt, even now, if any other place can produce three-criminals charged with greater atroctites than those who now occupy sing berths under our jailor's care. The first of these is Juneaux, accused of the murder of Sorbia Werner, who was found cut up joint by joint and packed up is a barrel in a freight depot in New York. The discovery of the body, the subsequent arrest of the criminal, and the disclosure of his relations to his victim, were disclosure of his relations to his victim, were the occasion of great excitement, and fed full the public appetite for horror. Finn, com-mitted for the murder of Viat in an adjoining township, is the next. The alleged excuse for his monstrons crime was in the fact, that Viat, or some man who looked like him, had once struck his (the prisoner's) mare. He overtook his victim on the high road driving overtook his victim on the high road driving peacefully toward home, and literally chop-ped him to pieces with a corn cutter; and, subsequently, learing that he was not dead, returned and chopped at the body, to make his murder sure! To-day another, McNauss, has been added to the list. He, in a fit of drunken rage, we know not at what hour, or upon what possible provocation, seized npon his wife, and, with his fists and heels, pounded and stamped her to death. We see many of the old Bonan games renewed, such as that of the discus, morra (whose classic naise I have forgotten), and many other anusements instituted by the ancients still existing unchanged. Men and boys are these engaged, as if the world were only a great play house, and each one plays his part as carnestly as if life or death were the issue. free men! The Chicago Times reached me a few days since at Petersburg. The people heard me read its false charges against Lincoln. Here stood around me, whilst I was reading the charges in the Times, those who fought in Maxico, some with arms off and some with legs off, that were in that war. They were under Baker, Harris, and others. Each man in the crowd said it—the whole charge as specified in Douglas' paper—was "a lie from beginning to end." I use their own words. Many said it was a shame, and that Douglas ought, by open letter under his own hand, to repudiate the charges; first, because they were false, and secondly as a matter of policy; and that Lincoln was too much of a gentleman to treat disposed; and the only indecement to eaten a pickpocket would be the pleasure of thrashing him with our cases, for the idea of obtaining justice here is laughed at as an absordity; it is entirely impracticable. eight cents we may ride to any part of the city, passing through the market streets, where all known estables are exposed for sale in the open air, and as we pass along, it may be interesting to make a few common-place observations. We notice entire streets devoted to particular trades. For example, here is one where nothing but hardware is sold—pots, ketiles, braxistra—
which serve here for parlor stoves when a fire
is required—every article that is made of metal;
there we see a long row of grocery shops; and again the passage is almost entirely obstructed by dry goods and elething, which extend along the street apparently in endless array. The

The proprietor or his wife sits at the door avaiting is droway expectation any chance customers, at the same time enjoying the lively scene without. They distinguish a stranger ammediately, especially an Angle-Saxon, and raise their prices secondingly. We find no one story houses in Naples, all having at least three, rarely less than six stories. This may seem strange in a country so famous for carthquakes; yet the reason as obvious, if we recollect how agreeable is shade when the face of nature is dried and withered by the hot summer's sun. Narrow streets and high houses, which during the winter make an liahan town so gloomy, are precisely its most agreeable feature during the religious tenets.

But this mode of arguing is decidedly falls-But this mode of arguing is decidedly falla-cious, and we shall presently show why. We sak, is polygamy a religious institution? Is it to worship God in a peculiar way? It is not a religious institution, for, the Mormon ereed is like that of any other seet, based on the Bible; but where do we find in the Bible the command to marry many wives? And though the Bible does not by any special prohibition for-bid us to marry more than one wife, and not-withstanding we can point to noble characters named in the Bible who practiced polygamy be fore and after the law was given, it is yet evi-dent that polygamy existed but by sufference. We can trace from the Bible itself that the will of God is that man should have but one wife. cisely its most agreeable feature during the while we are thus wandering through the While we are thus wandering through the aver-changing scenes, we do not, of course, escape the beggars; that would be a blessing too great even to be dreamed of. A whole chapter might be devoted to Nespolitan beggars. They are about as nunerous as the isboring classes, and enjoy the same social rank; they both regard the stranger's purse as common booty, and towards that one object each party sime its exertions. Poverty without deformity is indeed a curse; but those who possess both have the means not only of an baintence, but of luxary. The arts to which they resort in order to obtain money are often quite indicators. For instance, a healthy fellow in rags stands leaning against a wall all day, with eyes closed, andlong staff in hand, muttering as endless prayer for We can trace from the Bible itself that the will of God is that man should have but one wife. When God created man, he gave him but one mate. Nor from the time of Adam till Lamech, had any man married more than one wife. Why Lamech married two wives? that is difficult to say. Yet should we suggest a reason we would say, he believed in this way to increase rapidly the number of men on earth, a doctrine, by the by, long believed in but since contradicted. Again, turn we to nature awan the roice of nature tells us that man should have but one mate. All creatures that pair, as far as my recollection serves me, have but one mate, and as man has been created to mate with his wife, it is a rident that he was to have but one wife, with the only difference, that with other creatures who mate it was to be instinct, but with man, who is a free agent, it was to be free choice. against a wall all day, with eyes closed, andlong staff in hand, muttering an endless prayer for the peor blind man; a young mother lays her deformed child on the sidewalk, and running about among the crowd making the wildest gesticulations, demands alms in the name of all that is good and blessed; a lame woman hobbing along on crutches takes her station in frost of the post-office, and maints upon helping average comer from his carriage, not, for And thus nature substantiates our supposition we drew from the Bible, that it in the will of God that man takes but one wife unto binnelf for his mate-llut if it be the will of God indicated both in holy

So your be resulted from them: at Takilira in the same county, similar coal is had, and in great abundance. The value of this product to the county is very great. In 1855, three years since, it reached $60,000. On account of this abundance of timber and coal, Bureau is one of the most thickly actiled counties in the one of the most thickly settled cour State.

With the exception of some examp lands in the north-western part of the county, on Green river (which will one day be good also,) the lands are generally of excellent quality. The full range state of cultivation, is $10 to $50 per acre. One farm indeed, with superior shrubbery and other improvements brought $50 last year. The high-set sale of unimproved lands ever made here, was a quarier section, three miles from Princeton, at $33,75 per acre—a rise in a short time from $30. A sale of 17 eighties, unimproved, was made last season at $30. It was situated two to four miles from town. Worse land, in the older States and Canada, selt at double this rate. Town lots near Canada, ser at adouble this rate. Form to a hear the depot, in C. A. Stoner's addition sell at $30 a $30 per front foot, on Main st.; or $150 and upwards for lots, depending on location. Resi-dence lots on Main st., in the older part of town are $100 a $500 each, while business lots near the square range from $40 to $60 per from foot.

LABOR FARMS—A WESTERN WHEAT FIRE This county being comparatively thickly set-tied, the farms are not generally large, being mostly 180 to 400 acrea in extent. There are a few men, however, in Bureau, that in most States would be called extensive farmers. Ja-cob Albright farms fourtsen quarter sections or 2,340 acres; or rather he has this quantity of land in seven farms, under tenants. His partner in the produce business (Mr. Miller,) who, has received 10,000 bu, of grain at this depot

since the 12th inst, informs me that the samual receipts of Mr. Aibright's farm slove amount to 12,000 to 15,000 bushels of grain, to the production of which his farming operations are mostly confined. The Mosely brothers have farms of 1,000 acres each; Mr. Alma one of 1,300 acres; David Smith has a home farm of 1,700 acres, is To the latter I paid a visit last evening. It but an easy drive, three miles, from Prince-ton, I drove to it in company with Mr. Dee, through colonades of shade trees, by rich pieces of meadow land and fields of laxuririch pieces of meadow land and fields of luxuriant corn, cats and wheat—the swift horse's hoofs crushing the wild prairie flowers of the turf of the by-reads and lanes—our own frames invigorated by pure air and noble exercise. Arrived at the farm, I witnessed a beautiful sight—one thousand core of golden wheat in a single field! Twelve sightise of deep, rich prairie, enclosed with a single fence—nearly two square miles of a wheat-field—the yellow grain all head-dout and standing up beautifully. A carriage-road had been left through it, and from the summit of the farm, we could see the whole 1,000 acres, besides their adjoining corn-field of 300 acres, and an immense outs-field. This crop of spring club wheat will average 20 to 25 bushels per acre—20,000 bushels! The corn will easily average 50 bushels per acre—10,000 bushels of corn. Near the honse, a clear ice-cold, crystal corn. Near the honse, a clear ice-cold, crystal stream apouted out from a clump of rushes, a never falling spring. From this spot we could a never failing apring. Trom his spot we count also catch glimpses, not of the heavenly city from the "Delectable Mountains," but of the church spires of Princeton, the tops of the seminary and court house, and other distant objects. Are not such fields paradisiscal—the true Elysian Fields of the farmer, more agreeable than those of which Viruil same?

an Fields of the farmer, more agreeable than those of which Virgil sang?

On our return we saw on the farm of Mr. Lovejoy, the enclosure of the county Agricultural Society. It immediately joins the town. But iny letter is becoming too long, and must be drawn to a close without noting many things worthy of mention; the health, the pleasant resideness, the unequalited system of sidewalls, intensing to hade trees, dowers, etc. Suffice it to say, the land, fields and erops speak for themselves, and there is no room for argument

GEN. LANES' TRIAL TENTH DAY'S PROCEEDING

Occurrence of the Present Private.

Li wasser, Thursday Moraine, June St. 1834.

Mrs. E. Merrill, assorn—At the time Mr. Jezhin was killed I was standing in the door and saw.

Mr. Lase come from his house and return again to the house, and then come out again. I heard only two shots fired; the first from the house towards the gate, the other towards the house towards the gate, the other towards the house.

Mr. Lane first libe first gun. Simeling out a little distance from the house I saw the smoke of host discharges, must then turned and went into the house; I turned immediately after hearing the second discharge and went as; I first went to the door when they were going over to the well; I left for a moment, then returned again; soon after the firing commenced.

Cross Examined—I stood in the east door of Mr. Jenkin's house; think there were three law of the country, but not on religion, and where the constitution is against it, it is amenable. I might yet have added, to show that polygamy I might yet have added, to show that polygamy degrades and debases, robs woman of the high standing civilization has awarded her, etc., but we do not wish to pronounce our disapproval of polygamy, as almost every civilized country agrees in prohibiting polygamy. All that we desired was that we have a lawful right to interfere with the Mormons and to punish them too for violating the constitutional law, even with regard to their marrying more than one wife.

An insertion of this in your valuable paper will oblige your faithfully. oblige yours faithfully,

Western Elysian Fields—A Letter from

[Owing to a press for room, our letter from Princeston was dicided in the last issue rather abruptly. We this morning sive the notion which was omitted. It will appear entire in the weekly edition, for we would do full luttee to the pleasant and prosperous town of Princeton, by a glance it all its advantages, even though it require some length of space by default it.]

FLOUR AND OTLES BILLS, TANKERY, ac.

In addition to Bingham's mill, near the depot Messrs. Bobbin's, Lewson & Co., have erected an extensive steam Fouring mill, at a cost of $13,000, containing all the best modern machinery. From April '57 to April last, it ground 11,000 bibs, be'sides 30,000 bus, or 6,000 bibs custom work—in all 17,000 bibs four. The two shipping brands are "Princeton City" (the best) and "Bureau County" mills. They average 40 bibs per day at home, supplying 20 bakeries, which prevents large enough shipment to establish its character abroad. This locality has always been noted for its choice spring wheat, and much that is ground here is Club and Mediterranean. The hame firm are part owners of a new mill just erected by Chicago. Here are two steam planing mills and sush factory, a stove foundry, plow factory, and a commodious two story brick tangery, the "Excelsior," in which the patentee, Geo. W. Hafch, has for some years been introducing a new system of tanning leather. Bights are here for sale, by which a new and quicker tanning make all is used, as a substitute for bark, so scarce in a prairic country. Mr. H. claims his process as not half so expensive, requiring only one-fourth the usual room, as done by vegetable matter alone, and by its speed enabling capital to be turned four or five times oftener than the old manner, in the same length of time—that it is profitable, and the process and the leather tanned by it increasing in public favor.

Hair Hestprative.—Every one will, we think, agree with us in the opinion that the human hair is the greatest matural ornament that it possessed either by a gentleman or a lady. Just meet an apparently good locking man, for instance, in the street, you whire his features, whis kers and general bearing; but io! he lifts-his hat in reception of your how, and the charm has vanished, for leshabed is written on his hald head, an it he glory has departed with the flowing locks that once flourished invariantly there. In the case of a budy, the matter is, if possible, worse—such cases reminding one of the circumstance on which the following epitersm in founded:

"Ot give me, fair Emma, a fock of your hair."
A hashful young lover took courage and sighed.

Dana Su: —Your kind favor of the 14th is received.

I hardly agree with you, that a general movement can be made that will clean out the Augean Stable.—If the Democracy were over-thrown, it would result in giving place to a greater and hungrier awarm of fine.

The remedy of the South is not is such a process. It is in a diligent organization of her tree men, for primpt resistance to the next aggression. It must come, in the nature of things. No National Party can save us; so Sectional Party can de it. But if we could do as our fathers did, organize Committees of Nafavy all over the Cottan States, (and it is only in them that we can hope for any effective movement,) we shall fire the Southern heart—instruct the Southern mind—give courage to such other, and at the proper moment, by one organized, concerted action, we est precipitales the Cotton States into a revolution.

Wright: the Free-Lovers paid court to Sister Branch. They all had their Rittle private enjoyments in their own way.

The scenes in the hotel parlors, between-times, were curious. I stambled in among one party who were entertained by a deable performance. Near the window and a lady, a Mrs. Rivser, who improvised poetry in her head and music from a melancholy meledern of ancient patters, which she held in her lap. This was queer; but before the improviserire finished her lay, another female went into a trance, rushed across the room, violently saized a little woman in black, one Mrs. Townsend, ast her down in a chair, gathered up a male from among the sudience, and by joint efforts of these two Mrs. Townsend was thrown into a magnetic state. She presently began to talk, with her eyes tightly closed. She made an extapede series of observations addressed to the "Earth-children." but, for the life of me, I couldn't get any idea of the thread of her discourse. No doubt it was pretty. One advantage is derived from mingling with these people. One can pitk up so many new words to add to his vocabulary as to render "Webster's Dictionary" quite meless forever after. To be sure, the words mean nothing in particular; but then they are sonorous and polysyllable,—and that is a great thing. When they felt the divine afflatus moving within them, they experienced an "upperinging" and an "outgushing." They treated largely of "God's hummity," our great Humanity, and "the heart of humanity;" our great Humanity, and "the heart of humanity;" our prest Humanity, and "God's humanity," our great Humanity, and "the heart of humanity;" our prest Humanity, and "the heart of humanity;" our prest Humanity, and rived learners. "We shall say that we derive no advantage from "Free Conventions," when they did such new instre to our common English?
